“ I miss you so much, Krista. Still can't believe you're no longer here. You were always so tender hearted, generous, and kind. I am so grateful and thankful God allowed us meet and share so many beautiful memories. We were friends since the 9th grade and have gone on a rollercoaster ride of good and bads times together. I miss your laugh and the sweet, little sparkles in your eyes when we laughed together. I love you, Krista

“ I only really knew my dear niece, Krista, as a young child and a bit as a teenager. Her brothers and and she and her sister were very dear to me. She was determined and strong when I knew her, both as a young child and as a teenager. I remember that she had an elf-like look, like her mom. She was a trickster with a sense of humor, like all of her family. Her mother, my sister-in-law, loved her so much! Krista contacted me once after she became a mother, when Heather, who I've never met, was just a baby. (Coincidentally, I was just telling my sons, her cousins, about that conversation last week.) Krista and I had a beautiful, candid, and re-connecting conversation and I could see she was still determined and strong and filled with love, the kind of love that was strong in our family at one time and hopefully still is. I am devastated to hear that Krista has been suffering for so long. I know that if she was suffering, her daughter, Heather, must have been, and likely still is, struggling, too. It seems she was lacking what we all need: love, comfort, resources, and a strong safety net in times of trouble. Unfortunately, all too many are suffering the way Krista suffered. We all know this. We all give what we can when we can. It breaks my heart that this tragedy should be the opportunity for me to express my love and care. Krista mattered. Her life was important. All the love that her family was able to show her was and is significant. May your memory be a blessing, dear, sweet niece. I hold my memories of you close in my heart.

Thank you for your kind words. She was a wonderful woman and an even better mother. I only wished i was able to see her one last time. □
