“ Mick always had that toothy smile. Even the last time I saw him- we were bantering back and forth about characteristics of the different places we had lived, just a very down home KS mannerism to him. Even talking about things we didn't like , or things we thought were straight up wrong- always that toothy smile. He was always very positive in our conversations. These were all great things about him. I wish I would've gotten to know him better. Someday I will.
