“ Randy, here it is the second Christmas without you. I'm not doing so well. I miss you so much. I hope I am making you proud somehow. I love you hotdog rando!

“ Randy

What can I say? Randy was one of those people that could lighten a room with his personality alone. He was direct and blunt at times but it came from a place of caring and concern for those around him.

We had agreed on having a six pack to catch up and due to personal health reasons, I wasn't able to follow through with that before he was taken from us. He had the foresight to help guide his wife to stand her ground and to care for herself and her future when the day came that he left this world.

He will be terribly missed and it's hard to believe he's gone. When I see a work buggy going by, I expect to see him driving it and it's still a shock that I won't get to see that anymore. However, I know that every time that I pop open a cold one, he'll be there having one with me in spirit.
